

A course sample is required as part of the Course Writer membership. The sample and any supporting documents must be uploaded to the Course Writer application at the time of your online Course Writer application submission.

Samples will be reviewed during the application process. A course sample must be originally created by the applicant and should not contain any brand or organization names. Overall sentence structure and grammar included in the course sample must be correct to be considered for the Course Writer application type. The application will be declined if any of the required components are missing or if the components do not align to create a cohesive learning experience for learners. Revisions will not be accepted. If an application is declined, the applicant must reapply and submit a new or improved course sample for consideration. Course Writer applicants are limited to two separate attempts to apply for the permanent Course Writer membership.

This document provides an overview of required components and offers limited examples and details. The Course Writer applicant is expected to possess extensive knowledge of instructional design and adult learning principles and is responsible for individually applying their skills to build a comprehensive course sample in an effort to gain permanent approval as a Course Writer in the Develop system.

If you do not feel secure in your knowledge of instructional design and/or your skills in developing high quality course content, please reach out to the Trainer and Relationship-based Professional Development Specialist Support program (TARSS) at tarss@umn.edu before applying for the Course Writer membership. They can offer you guided support in helping you find additional training to strengthen your knowledge and skills in instructional design.
